

ABOUT THIS — AND — ABOUT THAT

By OLIVER GEDEIST

GONE.—Sometimes the muse is unkind. It seems to take wing and fly away to secrete itself in distant and secluded niches of the universe. Tired, perhaps, of the obtuseness of the writer's mind, maybe it flits away to seek refreshing of spirit from the warmth of distant stars. Wherever it is, I know it isn't here—nothing to incite the mind to prolific columnizing.

A SECRET.—Where a muse goes when it isn't here I do not know. I sit down to the faithful typewriter (it's always here, being inanimate) and the mind that was has disappeared—just gone away. Where an hour ago thoughts were racing through my mind, each seeming to clamor for the privilege of being the subject of the week's column, now only emptiness prevails. And emptiness of mind certainly is no help to a columnist.

LAZY.—I know there are some unkind souls who would charge the situation as the result of laziness. Such persons are logical souls, bless 'em, many circumstances they might be they were less logical. I wish they were less logical because while under ordinary circumstances they might be right—would be right, in this instance I question the accuracy of their judgment. I admit that on the face of it an admission that there is an absence of mind justifies readers in thinking that laziness is the root of the trouble. But "laziness" is not a pretty word. I wish there were another word less accurate, more elevating. Please select your words with delightful carefulness.

NOT ALONE.—But I am not alone. The evening is sultry, the day has been hot, and in my mind's eye I visualize thousands of persons indolently reclining in the open, thoughts drifting, only to be brought back to reality by the buzz or the sting of a mosquito or the crawling of one of those "cute" little bugs that have such affectionate adherence to human beings. So I am not alone. There! My mind returned for a fleeting moment, just long enough to say, "You're only making excuses. You ARE lazy, and you know it."

AGREEABLE.—I won't argue with that. It may be true. But if the muse would say, gracefully, affectionately like, you know, "You poor fellow, you're not lazy; you're just exhausted after a strenuous day," such a lift would be given to my spirits that respectability would instantly return. But a writer's muse should be honest. Mine definitely will not say what I would like to hear. My muse knows me. I will be agreeable, even though it is distasteful.

VALUE.—Since I am convicted of laziness by my own muse, let's see if there is value in laziness. I believe there is (although tomorrow I may be sorry I tried to prove it) value in laziness. Laziness, as you know, is the result of indolence, or the other way around, or the two words may be parallel. I could look it up in the dictionary, but unfortunately that source of knowledge lies on a shelf immediately back of me. To get it would require turning around. I won't do that. And there's proof that there's value in laziness. You see, do you not, that to turn around would require physical exertion. You see what effort I have saved myself. So there is value in laziness. I'm glad I thought of that. It makes me feel better.

SUGGESTION.—There's a suggestion in that for you, my friend. Too much exertion may shorten your years. Of course, it may, also, cause you to drift into obesity—into "that fat old loafer." But don't let that bother you. Just plunge into laziness with all the energy of nothing and drift into the fairyland of nothing to do and "I don't care." You will enjoy it, at least for awhile. There will descend upon you the inspiration to do great things; followed by the realization—I should say, happy realization—that you do not have to do the great things. Then you fall gracefully into your lethargy and let the busy world pass by.

ONE CATCH.—I believe I should warn you of a catch in the plan, however. The "catch" does not necessarily mean that virtue is absent from my suggestion. But it is somewhat important. If you can enjoy an orgy of indolence or laziness (call it what you will) and continue eating—and that reminds me, I'm hungry; I must go to work. Still, I urge that the idea is good, but, as you see, for me not at the moment practical.

Miss Martie Given Orland Park Shower

Miss Lois Cooper, Miss Mildred Rauch of Tinley Park, and Miss Joanne Martie of Mokena honored Miss Lucille Martie in the former's home in Orland Park with a miscellaneous shower Monday night. She was presented with a white corsage.

The home was decorated beautifully in the bride-elect's colors, American beauty and green. An umbrella, decorated in the same colors with streamers attached to each gift, was placed in the living room, from which the honored guest opened the gifts.

Various games were played, with duplicate prizes awarded. Refreshments were served to the 19 guests.

State Official Analyzes Will County Taxes

Schools Got 67 Pct. of '46 Increase

PAUL G. ROSENQUIST
EXPLAINS USE OF FUNDS

Out of every dollar of increased taxes in Will county in 1946, the schools took 67 cents, and if their budget requests had been possible of fulfillment, the $765,190 total increase in taxes would have risen by nearly another half million dollars. As a result, taxes were 20.2 per cent higher in Will county compared with an average increase of 18.6 per cent in the 64 counties already covered by an Illinois department of revenue local tax survey, according to figures released recently by Director Paul C. Rosenquist.

Local taxing bodies asked for $5,026,244 for 1946, but got only $4,549,251, and most of the funds that would have been collected were for the schools, the highs wanting an additional $360,000 and the elementaries $105,000. This duplicated the statewide picture, for out of the $15,481,205 increase in taxes in the 64 counties studied, $9,267,304 went to schools, or 60 per cent compared to 67 per cent in Will county.

No county had lower taxes in 1946 than in 1945, although five counties were able to keep their increase under 10 per cent. Pope and Pulaski, with one and three per cent increases respectively, were at one extreme, while at the other were Macon county, up 43.5 per cent, and Williamson county, 30.7 per cent higher.

Grouping all the taxing bodies in Will county into five major classifications in order to better compare them with the rest of the counties, the record shows:

In Will the county got an increase in 1946 of $102,822, or 18.2 per cent. In the 64 counties the average rise was 14.3 per cent over 1945.

Townships were given an extra $126,399, which amounted to a 27.5 per cent increase over last year. The statewide average showed a 13.0 per cent rise in the other counties.

City and village funds took a $63,697 share of 1946's increase and this was 15.4 per cent more than they got in 1945. For the state, the increase averaged 20.7 per cent above a year ago.

The school increase of $512,932 was a 23.9 per cent gain over 1945 and compared with an average rise of 20.0 per cent in the other counties.

Placing all other taxing bodies in a miscellaneous group, in Will county they got $40,660 less than they had in 1945, and this was a decline of 20.3 per cent compared with the 22.6 per cent higher average elsewhere in the state.

Individually, of course, no taxpayer will have a bill exactly like the county-wide averages given here for Will county. Each taxpayer will have a bill which reflects the changes in his own township, city, school districts, and the county.

One unexpected benefit arising from the 1945 state law to effect a uniform valuation program for Illinois was to reveal to some taxpayers in every county that they had been paying higher taxes proportionately than their neighbors. This became apparent when the property value on their bill actually was higher than a fair market price. In these cases, the matter should be taken up with the local Board of Review in order to correct next year's tax bill.

As for who got the money and where it was spent, these are purely local taxes levied by local officials for local needs. Not a penny goes to the state or is included in the state's budget. The state legislature comes into the picture solely as the means of granting taxing authority, setting a top limit beyond which the local agencies cannot go, and establishing a uniform system for the entire state. But the state cannot make local officials levy any taxes nor does it get a share of these taxes when they are collected.

Where did Will county's money go and where did it come from? What is behind the lump sum figures and percentages?

The county increase amounted to $102,822 and just about half of this, $50,187, went to support the newly established county health department which asked for funds for the first time this year. The highway program took $27,610 and the T. B. sanitarium needed an additional $13,823 this year for higher laundry, labor, and food costs. The corporate fund and retirement fund both got something more than $6,000 and bonds and interest were reduced by $1,529.

The $126,399 increase in township taxes piled up very quickly when road and corporate needs were totaled, the corporate fund getting $38,443, while hard roads got $45,395 and roads and bridges a $33,451 increase. Poor relief rose $15,000 in order to qualify for state aid, the library got $1,008, and the only decreases were $503 for the community building and $6,568 in the bonds and interest need. The big increase in corporate funds was due to the fact that in 1945 Joliet township had not asked for money for corporate purposes, but this year needed $37,719, a large part of the total increase of $62,898 over last year. Lockport and Washington townships, with $14,094 and $7,889 respectively, helped boost the total.

Cities and villages got $63,697 more, which was just a little better than half of what they wanted. Again, while all but judgments and public

Widow of Victim Alleges Taverns Sold to Driver

ACCIDENT CAUSED DEATH
ON AUGUST 23, 1946

An automobile crash that brought death to six persons on route 6 a year ago has resulted in the filing of a $35,000 suit against two Mokena tavern operators and one New Lenox tavern owner.

The suit was filed last week by Mrs. Mary Ellen Rinke of Mokena against Herbert Bruns doing business under the name of Bruns tavern, New Lenox, and Fred Robinson, doing business as Robinson's tavern, and Richard Mueller, doing business under the name of Mueller's tavern, the latter two in Mokena.

The crash in which six persons lost their lives occurred about 1 o'clock on the morning of August 23 last year.

Mrs. Rinke, widow of one of the victims of the crash, in her complaint alleges that the death of her husband was the result of the three tavern owners or their agents selling liquor to George Hentsch of Mokena, driver of the car in which Mr. Rinke was riding when he suffered injuries that caused his death.

The suit was filed under the dram shop law.

Sangmeister-Fleck

A very pretty wedding ceremony took place in the Frankfort Methodist church Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, August 23, when Miss Margaret Sangmeister, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christ Sangmeister of Joliet, and Arthur Fleck of Frankfort were united in marriage by the Rev. Lloyd Coleman, pastor of the church. The double-ring service was used.

The altar was decorated with garden flowers, white gladioli and ferns. Preceding the ceremony, Miss Wilma Mark, organist, played appropriate selections, while the Misses Marilyn Bennett and Doris Weyer of Wisconsin, cousins of the bride, dressed in yellow marquisette formals, lighted the candles. Miss Mark also accompanied Miss Kay Lambrecht, when she sang "Always" and "I Love You Truly."

Little Susan Fleck, dressed in a floor length orchid dress, carried a basket of flowers, followed by the bridesmaid, Miss Freda Sarclette of Joliet, attired in orchid gown with matching illusion head dress, carrying a bouquet of red gladioli. Following were Miss Loretta Maass, sister of the bride, maid of honor, dressed identically as the bridesmaid, only in pale green and with yellow gladioli. The bride, escorted by her father, wore a white satin princess style lace-trimmed dress with long train, wearing her mother's wedding veil held in place by a beaded halo. They were met at the altar by Charles and Mike Fleck, who attended their brother. Ushers were Elton Wernecka of Wisconsin and Frank Fleck.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served by the W. S. C. S. to the immediate families and relatives. Six girls of the M. Y. F. served as waitresses. They wore orchid tea aprons, a hair ornament, and handkerchief, a gift of the bride. In the evening a reception was given at the Frankfort grove to invited guests. Refreshments were served and dancing enjoyed.

Miss Martie to Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Martie of Tinley Park have announced the approaching marriage of their daughter Lucille, to Norman Bornet, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bornet, also of Tinley Park.

The wedding will take place in St. John's Evangelical church in Mokena Sunday, September 7, at 3 o'clock, with the Rev. William Reimann officiating. The wedding reception will be held in Saenger hall in Tinley Park at 8 o'clock that evening.

Shower

A personal shower was given in honor of Lucille Kampe, August 20, at the home of Miss Jean Keuch. Miss Bernice Stege and Miss Kuech were hostesses. The bride-to-be received many beautiful gifts. Bunco was played during the evening. Prizes were given to Mrs. Barney Hostert, Miss Marion Stige, and Miss Mildred Kampe, which they gave to the bride. Later in the evening refreshments were served.

Those present were from Tinley Park and Mokena.

C. G. Schanz Takes Over Orland Store

CREERS STARTED BUSINESS
IN 1912; GREW RAPIDLY

An Orland business landmark will pass into new hands next week, when the Creer grocery and market is taken over by C. G. "Chuck" Schanz of Tinley Park.

Mr. Schanz has operated Chuck's grocery and market in Tinley Park for the past 10 years.

The Creer store has been operated by Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Creer since 1912, when they moved to Orland Park from 169th street and Keane avenue.

"We started in a small way," Mr. Creer stated, "and built up the business and made many friends."

In recent times Mr. Creer's health has not been good enough to permit him to be as active as formerly, and his son Owen has carried on the major load of the business. Mrs. Creer also has declined in health. However, when Mr. Creer was asked if he was quitting all activity, he said he expected to keep himself busy with his affairs.

—that he definitely would not cease all activity. Son Owen is retiring with his father, but it was said that he also will have sufficient business activity with family affairs to occupy his time.

The building was not included with the sale of the grocery and market, it was stated.

Mr. Schanz, who will be in control of the store and market at opening time the day after Labor Day, told The Semmler Newspapers that the size and volume of the store and market met his requirements, and he expects to maintain the same friendly relations with Orlanders that has characterized the Creers through the years, and which "Chuck" has maintained with his Tinley area customers over the long period in which he has been in business in Tinley.

"My business has expanded until my limited quarters will not permit carrying larger stock," Mr. Schanz said, "and when Mr. Creer wanted to sell, I decided to buy. I will take over the business September 1," he stated.

Mr. Schanz expects to sell his "Chuck's Grocery and Market" in Tinley Park so he will be able to devote all his attention to his newly acquired business in Orland.

DOG JUMPS STAND ROCK . . . In the early 1880s, Henry H. Bennett, pioneer photographer, made first action shot of his son leaping across the gap between mainland cliff and towering Stand Rock landmark at Wisconsin Dells, Wis. An accident to a guide in the 90s caused the owners of the scenic property to prohibit further jumping. Recently, however, Bennett's grandchildren trained a large dog to make the leap (see inset) for benefit of amateur photographers.

The Western-Winchester exhibition shooter holds his empty gun in his left hand and hurls the egg aloft (left). Egg in air, he inserts shell in chamber (center), then swings on the target and scrambles it medium well. Moral: With the price of eggs predicted to zoom to $1.00 a dozen, the practice of shooting at them as they pass overhead is expected to become generally widespread.

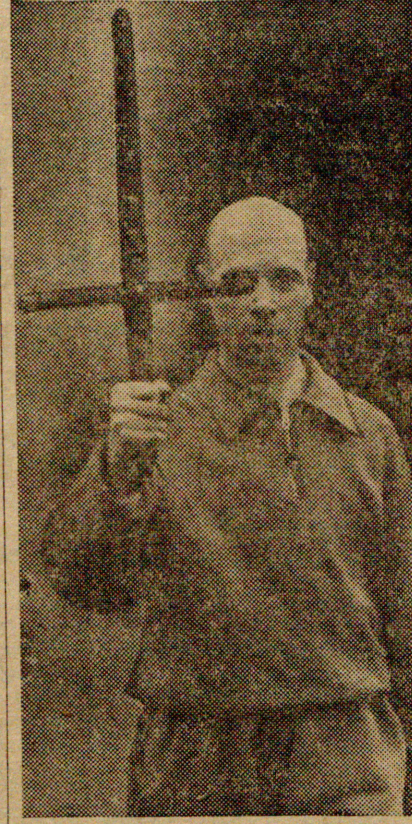

SUPERFORTS OVER MOUNT FUJI . . . This flight of six B-29 superfortresses makes a majestic picture as the huge bombers soar over Japan's towering Mount Fuji. The big ships were on a training mission to intercept naval forces at sea for a practice bomb run. Even in summer there is snow to be seen in the crevasses near the peak of the mountain. B-29s roaring peacefully over Japan are a common sight in 1947.

THE FICTION CORNER

THE PORK BANDIT
By DEE RANDALL

NOSEY COLLINS, as you know, is the Number One Egoist of the day. Just as Napoleon once laid claim to the title. But that was back in the 17th or 18th century. And nobody bothers much about him any more. Except those who like to dig and delve into musty old history books.

Napoleon had only an Empire to conquer. Nosey had a newspaper office and an ever-loving Tillie as his territorial grounds.

It's true, it proved rather expensive this ego-building business. But no matter the cost, Nosey is acclaimed as a self-made man. One of the finest men on the staff of the Daily Gazette.

Besides Tillie and the newspaper office, it must be revealed, Nosey has still another love. She now lay cozily in her private retreat... the right hand drawer of Nosey's desk.

There was a quiet purr as Nosey patted the soft, dirty white fur on Dermie's neck.

Dermie was the nickname for Hypodermic. A name fitting to the oversized cat because you really had to stick a needle in her to make her stir.

There was only one other thing that would rouse this reflexing feline. That was the smell of boloney or liver, even from the farthest corner of the ink-smattered city room.

Originally from the restaurant on the corner where she was expected to rid the place of mice and make herself generally useful, she had found refuge in Nosey's comfortable desk drawer. The clatter of dishes and hustle bustle of the crowded restaurant had proved too much for her sensitive nerves.

Nosey stopped his tender patting. This annoyed Dermie no end. Raising her head, which was more energetic than she cared to use, she perked a quizzical eye at him.

"Dermie," Nosey spoke seriously, "If we could get a beat on this Pork Bandit case, we'd sure have something."

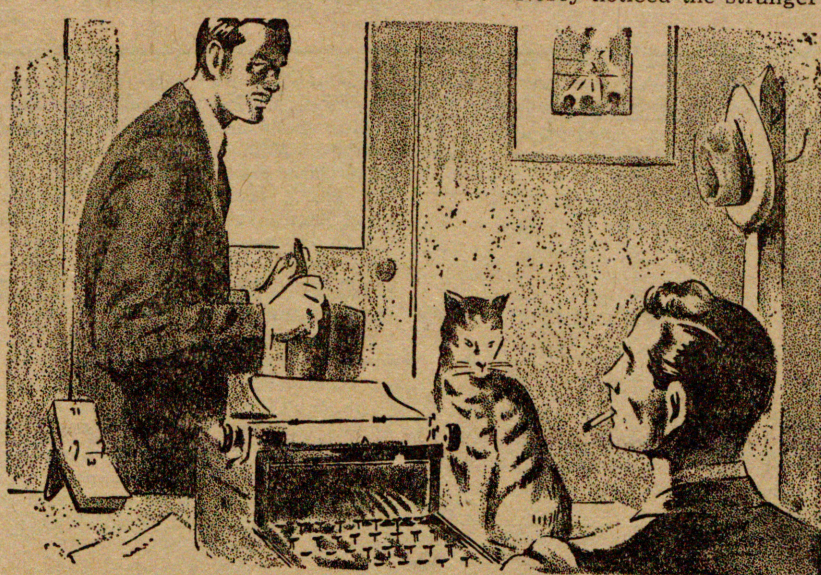

Dermie's answer was an assenting hiss.

"Seven butcher shops in seven days," Nosey went on, "that's a record for any criminal. He's plenty nervous, too. Sent them all a notice beforehand. He's got the cops in a quandary. Must be a ghost bandit." Here he snickered scornfully at the idea of a ghost ransacking a cash register and sticking a butcher knife in a man's back.

"What puzzles me," Nosey went on with his one-sided conversation, "is how he gets in and out with the cash right under their eyes. And why does he always pick on pork stores? The same chain all the time. If we could get to the bottom of that, we'd be getting some place."

Dermie's boredom with this conversation was evident. She settled back on the comfortable pillow installed in the drawer. But not before looking at the empty plate before her. Soon she was snoring peacefully. She knew the plate would be filled later on.

The stranger's hand quivered nervously as Nosey motioned him to a chair.

Nosey read and reread the unsigned note on his desk. "Maybe I'll be able to get a lead out of this after all," he reflected. Some butcher has received a note saying his store would be next. He was coming in to speak with the editor. The editor had turned the whole business over to Nosey disgustedly. News seldom walked right into a newspaper office. Leads that came in by mail might better have been called "misleads." Usually some quick seeking publicity.

Grim determination could be seen in the set of Nosey's features. The editor had faith in him. He would have to get to the bottom of this thing. As number one egoist, he felt certain he could.

AN INDIGNANT public was becoming boisterous in their vehement denials of this Pork Bandit who slew and robbed at regular daily intervals. The editor had hinted at a bonus or something equally satisfying financially to the guy who got a lead on this story. It would sure come in handy, Nosey dreamed. Next month he and Tillie were getting married.

A glint of happiness filled his usually placid eyes. Sweet Tillie with her flaxen curls. And how she could cook! Nosey's mouth watered in anticipation of the daily meals, like those he had already sampled at Tillie's little apartment.

Dermie opened drowsy eyes and looked reflectively at the still empty plate. She let out a growling hiss and rousing herself, waddled off indignantly. She wasn't used to such shabby treatment.

Nosey had no time to worry over this breach of friendship in Dermie's indignant stamping off. In fact, she was back in a few moments, rubbing her face against his pants leg as a reminder of her gnawing vitals. She hadn't been fed in two hours.

Nosey paid no attention to her pleading. He was waiting for the stranger who was to visit him. At precisely three o'clock, as the note stated, a tall, shabbily dressed man appeared. His dark hair was sleeked neatly back, but otherwise he was hardly a picture of sartorial elegance.

"Mr. Collins? You received my note?" Nosey noticed the stranger's hand quivered nervously as he beckoned him towards a chair. He took the paper the man handed him.

"I'm manager of the store on East 80th street. Received this note early this morning. I left the place and hurried right down here as soon as I could. Didn't have time to change my clothes." He looked down apologetically.

"Your store will be next. This afternoon," the note read. It was signed: "The Pork Bandit."

Nosey scanned the writing carefully. Nothing there to give much of a clue. "Have you seen the police?"

"No sir, thought I'd speak to you first. They seem to be getting nowhere fast," he laughed ruefully. "There has been a note before each crime, you know," he reminded him. Nosey, absent-mindedly patted Dermie's neck. She stirred, looked languidly at the visitor and dozed off again.

Nosey asked him a lot of questions and the visitor seemed anxious to supply all the details possible. "I'm flattered you have so much confidence in us," Nosey told him. "Will you pardon me a moment while I get my notebook. I want to jot down all the information you can give me."

Now Nosey never bothered with a notebook. Any old piece of copy paper did for the hottest scoop.

Outside the city room, Nosey headed for a telephone booth. He made a call, picked up a notebook from a protesting stenographer and returned to his nervously waiting visitor.

He wrote down sentences scrupulously, making sure to dot every "i" and cross every "t." To anyone looking on, it was evident Nosey was stalling for time.

It was only a matter of a few minutes before the two husky cops arrived. A pair of handcuffs were clinched on the now sputtering visitor who demanded to know the meaning of this.

"Here, boys," Nosey addressed the cops, "is your Pork Bandit." He kind of sneered over the name as only a real egoist could do.

The man suddenly stopped battling. "How did you know?" he asked.

"Well, you see," Nosey drawled, his five feet four swaying magnificently, "you said you just came from your pork store. When Dermie woke up and just went right back to sleep again. I knew that was a lie. If you had really come from there, she would have been over there sniffing your pants and licking your leg, maybe even chewing a piece out of it. It's past her meal time now," he smiled down fondly at Dermie who had stirred at mention of her name, looking expectantly at the empty plate.

He went on: "Then you told me some details that the police have carefully guarded from the public. Nobody but the Pork Bandit himself could have known them."

The man hung his head despairingly. "I used to own half of the chain of stores," he spoke bitterly. "Until my partner swindled me out of my share. It was the only way I knew of to get back what really belonged to me."

For a moment Nosey's gaze was sympathetically bent towards the man's back as they led him away. Then he returned to Dermie.

"Have patience, old girl," he patted her head. When he returned, there was an extra cushion in Dermie's drawer domicile and a brand new plate. It has two sprightly mice painted on it. This has caused no end of concern to Dermie, who, minus her once sharp teeth, can't figure out just how to bite into the little rascals. She doesn't have any trouble with the extra helpings of boloney, though.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON TEXT FOR AUGUST 31—Proverbs 6:6-11; 18:9; 24:30-32; Ecclesiastes 5:12.

MEMORY SELECTION—Whatever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might.—Ecclesiastes 9:10.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

By WILLIAM CULBERTSON, D. D.
Of The Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

WISE indeed is that legislator who understands that there are two extremes to be avoided in dealing with the problems of the working man. The one extreme is that heartless, cruel exploitation of labor which grinds men to powder, which deals with individuals as chattel. The other extreme is to provide such an amount of free time for the individual that both his personal life and economic prosperity are in danger.

Work is good. It is well to keep in mind that before the fall man was commanded to tend the garden. Perhaps to some of us that command is not a command to work, because the evidences of sin in a cursed creation were not present!

Life without purpose, life without activity for good, would be vain and actually intolerable.

I. An Illustration of Prudence and a Warning Against Indolence (Prov. 6:6-11; 18:9).

THE illustration from the creature world is apt. Ants, as this scripture states, have no overseer, and yet they are diligent in providing for the time of need.

It would seem as though they are constantly active in caring for present and future needs. In Palestine, where they may be active throughout the year, there is still the need of stored provisions for the rainy season, and so it is true that the ant gathers food in the harvest for future need.

Anyone who is tempted to be indolent would be wise to consider the ways of the ant, and to manifest as much concern for present and future needs.

The sluggard is described as one asleep, as one who is never satisfied, but constantly wants more slumber. Such folding of the hands, such indolence, brings poverty, and that poverty comes as a robber.

Indolence is not mere passivity. The man who fails to work is not guilty of omitting to do what he should do, but he is actually a robber of society. There is an active element involved in indolence; not only has the man failed to contribute, but, in addition, the good that he might have done has remained undone. The sluggard is therefore a brother to the destroyer (Prov. 18:9).

II. An Illustration of Indolence and a Lesson in Prudence (Prov. 24:30-32).

IT IS striking that the Word of God presents the ant as the illustration of prudence, but when it comes to an illustration of indolence it directs our attention to man.

The illustration is that of the man who is lazy, who is void of understanding. The Preacher visits him. Going to his field and vineyard, he finds it grown over with thorns, covered with vetches, and the stone wall broken down.

Instead of citing the particular lessons learned, the Preacher simply observes that he looked on, thought deeply, and received instruction. Perhaps the best antidote to laziness is to see it in its inaction. The squalid conditions, the inability to cope with emergencies that we normally see in the life of the man who wants only ease are sufficient to warn most of us against it.

Entirely apart from the dignity of labor, the homely recompense of being able to meet our own needs is the compensation of self-respect that initiative and resourcefulness bring. May we have a higher goal as we labor than merely providing for our own needs, though this is certainly important. Beyond it, of course, is the ability to help others also (cf. Eph. 4:28).

III. A God-Given Reward for Labor (Eccles. 5:12).

ONE of the great compensations of faithful labor is sleep. This passage speaks of the sleep of the laboring man as sweet. When as Christians we have fulfilled our duty, when we have given an honest day's work, the recompense of the Lord is surcease from labor.

The great stress of the Word of God is similarly on the man in authority doing that which is right for those who labor under him, and on the laborer, to be worthy of his hire. Thus does the Bible guarantee a cordial and happy relationship between employer and employee. When either party departs from biblical standards, chaos results.

Here is a plan as up-to-date as the present hour, as workable as the most precise mechanical device ever made. All that is necessary is that the Word of God be followed. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

V. F. W. Ceremony

The Owen W. Winter, Jr. Post 4241, V. F. W., held an impressive ceremony last Friday, August 22, on the grounds of the VFW ball field. It was one of the few meetings which can be public. The occasion was for the long form of installation into the society of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The setting for the ceremony included a plot of hallow ground, with a white cross and steel helmet representing the Unknown Soldier, and a banner of white crosses on a green field representing Flanders field. On one corner of the area there was a pup tent with an artificial camp fire and a sentry on duty.

The officer of the day introduced the commander-to-be to the past commander and ordered the salute to the commander. The commander then took colors. The Captain of the ritual team of the Chicago Heights post was introduced and the team was escorted to their posts. Then there was the presentation of colors by the commander, who gave a talk on the duties of the members. There were 20 recruits who were not fully pledged into the organization until this ceremony, when they were decorated with the insignia. They were as follows: James Ek, Charles Schneider, Wendel Burg, Ben Kruse, Art Clark, Joe Major, George Alex, George Stavron, Peter Rudd, John Beckley, Bill Hasse, Ralph Young, Rudy Day, Frank Miller, Andy Walsh, Clarence Schaeffer, Carl Krejca, Tommy Sebena, John Burleson, Donald Ek. The color bearers were Bill Hasse and Ralph Young.

Everyone attending the bridal shower for Mary Rogers last Thursday had a lovely time. It was given at the VFW hall, which was decorated with blue and white streamers with a cluster of white bells hanging from a blue bow.

Vacation is over, the postcarding through,
The snapshotting's finished, the sun-
tanning too,
That sweet summer romance, is now
a thing of the past,
And we're back on the job, to rest up at last.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Knight returned Sunday from a three weeks' vacation spent mostly at Cambridge, Mass.,
with their children and grandchildren.
Mr. and Mrs. DeTurk and children.
They also visited Mrs. Knight's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard, at Gloucester.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Geist and family spent Sunday with her sister in Kankakee.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kopman attended the Indiana state fair at Crown Point recently.

The Roy Mueller family enjoyed a day's outing Sunday at Moose lake.

Mr. and Mrs. William Batson and Mr. and Mrs. John Topp attended the Wisconsin state fair at Milwaukee, Sunday.

Guests in the Edward Batson home
Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. John Eisle and family and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Gibson of Kankakee, and Marie Terenz of Manila, P. I. Miss Terenz learned to know the Eises when their son was stationed at Manila. She is the daughter of a high-ranking family and a teacher. She came to the United States to attend school at Iowa State college last year; now she expects to enter a college in New York, after which she will return to her native home and resume teaching.

The Dora Bettenhausen property was sold to Logan Belver of Chicago the last week.

The Amite club met Tuesday evening, August 19, at the home of Mrs.
Clara Pfeiffer at New Lenox. The evening's business consisted of preparing a sunshine box for one of their members, Mrs. Myrtle Gullickson, who has been ill for quite some time, suffering with arthritis. This box contains a gift for each day of the month, to be opened on that particular day by the recipient. She also received a bouquet of gladioli. Pinochle was then played and Miss Lankenau captured the prize. Refreshments were served by the hostess. The next meeting will be at the home of Edith Heuser, September 9.

The cradle roll party was held in the parlors of St. Peter's Friday afternoon, August 22. The meeting was opened with the singing of two songs.

Fred Stucka read two poems. Present for the occasion were 12 cradle roll members, 10 beginners, 18 mothers, 12 grandmothers, 3 great-grandmothers, in banquet fashion, with loads of

WANTS HOMES

We have cash buyers waiting for anyone wishing to sell property. Kindly phone our office for one of our special agents to call. We have sold millions of dollars worth of property on the South and Southwest sides. I specialize in suburban homes. I don't fool around, the minute your home is listed with me for sale I get ready to advertise in the Chicago Newspapers and seven salesmen start to work on it. They start calling on clients who have been out to my office and told us just what they would be interested in I send a copy of the paper to each owner where my advertisement appears. In this way you are sure your property has been advertised. A great many times the property is sold before we have a chance to advertise. When a deal is pending we hold off our advertisement a few days as each salesman has many cash buyers to get in touch with immediately. I demand action from my Salesmen and if the house is not sold within a reasonable time it is advertised again and the Salesmen are instructed to double their efforts. If you price your property at a fair price and give it to me for sale I can assure you that you will get quick action.

COLORFUL FIESTA GARB . . . Descendants of Spanish Conquistadores and Pueblo Indians will stage a re-enactment of their final peace treaty as a highlight of the Santa Fe Fiesta. Colorful costumes, like those worn by the Pueblo Indians (above), will add a reminder of the past to fiesta time.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

Historic Fiesta Commemorates Reconquest of Old Santa Fe

WNU Features.

SANTA FE, N. M. — "Hasta la Fiesta!" That old Spanish greeting resounds through the streets of Old Santa Fe as preparations near completion for the 235th annual edition of the historic Santa Fe Fiesta. Descendants of Spanish Conquistadores and Pueblo Indians once again will join together at the four-day Labor Day fiesta, opening August 29 and continuing through September 1, by staging a re-enactment of their final peace treaty drawn up in 1692.

America's oldest community festival, the Santa Fe Fiesta, commemorates the reconquest of the southwest territory and especially of Santa Fe, the former Spanish capital, by Gen. Don Diego de Vargas in the year 1692. The reconquest came 12 years after the Indian uprising in which all Spanish persons north of the border fled back into Mexico or were killed.

Twenty years later, in 1712, Marquis de la Penuela, governor and captain general of the New Mexico territory, decreed that a fiesta should be held annually "for all time to come" in honor of the retaking of the City of Santa Fe. This was in keeping with a vow, made prior to the reconquest by General De Vargas, to hold a fiesta in honor of the Virgin of Guadalupe.

This annual celebration, prior to World War II, was one of the outstanding festivals in the country, with thousands of tourists coming to join with local Spanish-Americans, Mexicans, Indians and Anglos (Caucasians who have settled here from other states).

The colorful pageantry of the reconquest of the city, the covered wagon days parades, Indian markets and dances, native musicians with their folk music and dancing, often including, as it will this year, the importation of a Mariachi band or orchestra from Old Mexico, Conquistadores Baile or Ball, always have intrigued fiesta visitors.

This year for the first time since 1941, all major features have been included in the program and from the burning of Zozobra (a giant 100-foot figure of the god of gloom) on Friday evening, until the last musical concert on Monday evening, hilarity and the spirit of fiesta will reign supreme.

Sunday is given over largely to appropriate religious activities. Highlights include a procession to the church of high Catholic dignitaries, a high pontifical mass and an evening candlelight procession in which thousands of pilgrims bearing lighted candles wend their way through the streets, with luminarios and pinon fires helping to light their way.

Santa Fe, oldest capital city in the nation, will be decked out in gala holiday attire for fiesta time. Gay bunting and colorful banners will adorn city streets, and many residents will be bedecked in colorful old costumes reminiscent of early Spanish and Indian days.

Perched in mountainous country at an elevation of 7,000 feet, Santa Fe holds forth its cool, invigorating climate as an added lure for fiesta visitors. The city and the nearby area are replete with authentic historic sights which beckon to many tourists who, like the freighters of old, make their last stop at the terminus of the Santa Fe Trail.

Shakes Rugged Hoof

PORT TOWNSEND, WASH.—Regular attendant at all community dances is J. C. ("Jack") Ryan, 90. "If I do say it myself I'm one of the liveliest men on the floor," Ryan says. He had to quit work when he was 88 after he was injured seriously in a bus wreck.

School Promotes 'Taps' for Farmers

TULSA, OKLA.—It sounded all wet when the Chamber of Commerce listed a "Hot and Cold Running Water School" in its calendar of coming events.

But all was clear after Farm Manager C. A. Border offered his explanation. His idea, it appears, is to replace the "old oaken bucket" with a newfangled faucet by installing water systems in farm homes. Figures compiled by Border show

Minister Renounces Salary To Take Job As Railroad Laborer

LANARK, ILL.—Renouncing his church salary because of a "steady decline in revenue," the Rev. Harmon H. Bro, 27, pastor of the Christian church, has taken a job as a railroad section hand to support his family.

The minister, a Harvard graduate and son of a college president, told his congregation he will continue to serve the church without salary, which was $200 a month, including parsonage rent. He is married and the father of a baby daughter.

His job as a railroad section hand pays 85 cents an hour for a 48-hour week, a total of $177.66 a month.

In announcing his decision to take the job, Mr. Bro told his congregation:

"There are too many people in modern churches who think that the kingdom of God is just something you hire a preacher to worry about so the congregation can relax."

He explained that "only about 30" of the church's 100 members attend services regularly. Church income, he added, has been dropping regularly.

Fire Lookouts Watch For Careless Airmen

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—Airplane pilots are supplanting careless motorists as the bane of U. S. forest service fire-fighters, according to Supervisor F. C. Koziol of Wasatch National forest.

It used to be that motorists carelessly flipping cigarettes from their car windows or knocking out pipe ashes were blamed for the majority of man-set forest fires. Now, Koziol says, fire lookouts have been warned to keep their binoculars trained on pilots of aircraft.

"It has been established in many instances that aircraft have flown over areas immediately before fire has broken out," he reports. "With no other causes discovered, there's a distinct possibility that burning material tossed from the planes caused the fires."

SEVEN hundred thousand votes cannot elect a President of the United States, but it is a whale of a lot of votes, Russia claims that although the Communist party in this country numbers only 70,000, there are 700,000, including fellow travelers, who can be depended upon to do the bidding of Moscow. It may be true, but I wonder if they were actually counted, or is that but a figure provided by Henry Wallace, the CIO and other interested parties?

Making Homes From Shacks

IN THE little California city of Orange stood an old barn in which horses and cattle had been housed when the site of the city was but a part of a desert ranch.

That old barn sat right in the center of the best residential section. It was an eyesore to those having homes near it. The owners of those homes wished many times the two lots, portions of both of which the barn occupied, would be sold, and the disreputable structure torn down.

But I will go back a few years and get the story in sequence:

When America entered World War I, W. O. (Bill) Hart was, and had been for some years, editor of the Orange paper. With the nation at war he laid aside the editorial pencil, and captained a machine gun company in the United States army. Elsie, his wife, remained at home to care for their small children, regretting there was not something she could do which she could consider more heroic. When World War II came along, the government told Bill he had passed too many birthdays to be eligible for a place in the armed forces; that he could serve best by supporting the war through the columns of his newspaper, and let his three sons do the fighting for the family. This they did.

A year and more before Germany quit, Bill Hart died in an airplane crash. The following day his son, Bill Jr., in the air corps of the army, died in another plane crash. Elsie Hart again wished for a practical and essential way to serve.

REMODELLED OLD BARN

The housing problem in Orange, as in all other places, was acute. Munition plant workers, and officers and men of the army and navy were clamoring for homes in which their families could live. There were no vacancies and no materials with which to build houses. In that condition Mrs. Hart saw a small opportunity. She would turn the family garage into a home. With such materials as several junk yards could yield, she produced a cozy and comfortable four-room home for a family.

She found a small, untenanted and unlivable shack, with a useless shed behind it. She bought the place and, using the same methods as she had applied to the garage, she produced another attractive small home. She bought another unlivable wreck of a house, and again she turned it into a home—a real prize for a family and a credit to the city.

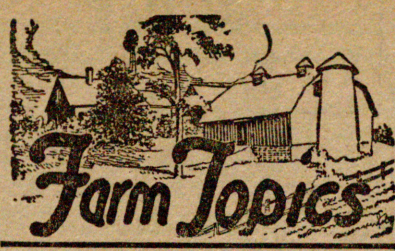

But Elsie Hart's real masterpiece is the home she made from that old barn. She bought it and the two lots. The barn was built of California redwood. It had not rotted, and never will. With gabled windows set into the steep roof, an appropriate front entrance, small paneled windows, she gave the house old colonial appearance. With brick fireplaces, three of them, the one in the kitchen fitted with all the appliances of an old colonial kitchen, she carried the same impression to the inside. The old barn has been transformed into one of the most attractive homes in a city of attractive homes.

An ingenious woman who is talented in home, rather than mere house, has helped her home town solve one of the big problems that has faced, and is still facing, all American communities. Elsie Hart has played her part, as did Bill, and Bill Jr.

Useless 'Jobs' Will Remain

POLITICS being politics, regardless of which party is in power, it was probably too much to expect any considerable reduction in the many agencies, bureaus and administrations of the federal government. Useless as many of them may be to John Q. Public, they do provide jobs, and jobs represent patronage. Those bureaus were created by a Democratic administration, but the jobs they represent can be filled by a Republican administration if and when there comes such a change. As long as the jobs are filled by Democrats the present administration wants them continued. Anticipating a possible change, the Republicans wish to retain these jobs so they may be awarded to the faithful when a new tenant occupies the White House. So John Q. Public will continue to support a useless bureaucracy. John Q. wants debt reduction and tax reduction, but politics must be served, and bureaucracy marches on.

SEVEN hundred thousand votes cannot elect a President of the United States, but it is a whale of a lot of votes, Russia claims that although the Communist party in this country numbers only 70,000, there are 700,000, including fellow travelers, who can be depended upon to do the bidding of Moscow. It may be true, but I wonder if they were actually counted, or is that but a figure provided by Henry Wallace, the CIO and other interested parties?

Bacteria as Plant Food Increases Grain Yield

The use of bacteria as food for plants is the basis of a new preparation known as phosphobacteria, developed at Leningrad institute. Each gram of the preparation contains up to 200 million specially cultivated bacteria, which on reaching the soil transform complex organic matter containing phosphorus into soluble salts from which the plant can draw nourishment. The bacteria increased crop yields.

Instrument Enables Dancer To Produce Accompaniment

The strangest electronic musical instrument, developed by Leon Thermin of New York in the early 1930s, consists of an inch-high platform backed by a stand having a loud-speaker and two six-foot vertical metal rods, says Collier's.

As the pitch and volume are controlled by the waving of the hands near these rods, a dancer performing on the platform can, by her movements, produce her own accompanying music.

Mississippi was the first state in the Union to establish a state-supported college for women, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica. The institution was founded in 1884.

With an estimated 2,175,000 marriages in the United States last year, a new record was reached here, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica 1947 Book of the Year. This is over one-half million more marriages than in 1945.

All Social Items

Restored to Inside

Beginning with last week, all social items from all sections in Semmler Newspaper land are inside. For some time an experiment was conducted, putting Tinley Park and Orland and Oak Forest only on the front pages of the respective newspapers.

As a result of the test, so many readers expressed dissatisfaction with the lack of information concerning activities over the entire Semmler Newspaper land that the social activities were restored to inside page and now every section is represented in the pages of The Semmler Newspapers.
